THE LEGEND OF LITTLE PEAKL

"Peop little Pearl, good little Pearl!" Signed every kindly neighbor; sa so sad to see a girl o tender doomed to labor.

The wee bird fluttered from its next Too soon, was that meak creature; Just fit to rout in mother's breast, The darling of fond Nature

> God shield poor little ones, where all Must belp to be bread bringeral For once afont, there's none too small To ply their tiny fingers.

Poor Pearl, she had no time to play The merry game of childho From dawn to dark she worked all day A wooding in the wild wood.

When others played, she stole apart In pale and shadowy quiet; Too full of care was her child-heart For laughter running riet. Hard lot for such a tender I fo,

But like a womanly wee wife, She bravely hore her burder One wintry day they wanted wood, When need was at the screet: Poer Pentl, without a bit of food,

And miserable guerdon;

But there she sank down in the enow, All over numbed and eching: Poor little Pearl, she cried as though Her very heart was breaking.

The blinding snow shut out the house From little Pearl so weary; The lonesome wind among the boughs Mouned with its warning secrie.
